

Guide for explaining to siblings

Siblings also feel, ask and need a place. Explaining honestly and tenderly strengthens the whole family's bonds.

- Use simple, age-appropriate words; answer what they ask.
- Validate their emotions: they may feel love, jealousy or anger, and that's okay.
- Explain that fairness isn't giving the same, but what each one needs.
- Invite them to take part without adult responsibilities.
- Give them one-on-one time with you: they need to feel seen too.

A conversation, not a speech. You don't need to explain everything at once. It's a dialogue that grows over time and with their questions.
